- Internships may be with government agencies, think tanks, NGOs, research centers, consulting firms, or other entities that offer professional job experience.

- Internships may be in the fields of diplomacy, defense, intelligence, foreign policy, national security, homeland security, international affairs, international development, human rights, and related fields.
- Internships must last a minimum of six weeks of full-time work, or its equivalent (240 hours).
- Internships may be in the United States or abroad.
- Internships may be paid or unpaid.
- Students who accept unpaid internships are invited to apply for a stipend through the Clements Center for National Security's Summer Student Development Fund. Funds are limited and stipends are not guaranteed for certificate students.
- Students are responsible for informing the Faculty Committee of their internship plans; submitting a proposal for an internship to satisfy the certificate requirement; and submitting proof that the internship was completed.
- The Faculty Committee reviews students' internship experience to ensure it is relevant to security studies and was satisfactorily completed.

Waivers: Students may apply for a waiver for the internship requirement if they are enrolled in ROTC; have prior military experience with no major disciplinary actions against them; or have extensive prior civilian job experience directly related to security studies. The Faculty Committee reviews applications to waive the internship requirement.

13. Give a Detailed Rationale for Change(s):

Security studies is a growing academic field, and corresponds to growing professional demand for students with interdisciplinary training in national and international security. An increasing number of the top 100 national universities have centers, degree programs, majors, and certificates recognizing a focus on international or national security, including many of UT Austin's peer institutions.

In 2008 UT Austin formed the International Relations and Global Studies Program (IRG), which has proved enormously popular with undergraduates and is a valuable addition to UT's offerings: IRG is helping prepare UT graduates for an increasingly globalized and interconnected world. IRG offers a concentration in International Security—currently the only path available for UT undergraduates who want to focus their studies on a security-related field. IRG now has over 800 undergraduate majors, including over 200 who are concentrating in international security, further demonstrating student demand in this area. Unfortunately, the concentration is not recognized on students' transcripts and is only available to IRG majors.

UT Austin is well-positioned to broaden and deepen its offerings on security studies. The Normandy Scholars Program, the Strauss Center for International Security and Law, the establishment in 2013 of the Clements Center for National Security, and the subsequent creation of the two centers' Intelligence Studies Project have already positioned UT Austin at the research and graduate student level as one of the premier universities for security studies in the nation.

We propose to expand this emerging strength to undergraduate students. Specifically, we propose that UT Austin create a transcript-recognized, interdisciplinary, undergraduate Certificate in Security Studies open to all students in the College of Liberal Arts. This certificate builds on and expands UT's current security-related offerings. It draws on the expertise available in IRG, the Straus and Clements Centers, and the Intelligence Studies Project, and capitalizes on the interest generated by those programs. It recognizes that there are already dozens of security-related courses offered across at least eight different departments in the College. It encourages students to tie these courses together in a focused course of study—and it requires students to supplement their in-class learning with a professional internship.

(We recommend allowing ROTC cadets to waive the internship requirement because they are obligated to attend a Leader Development and Assessment Course during the summertime, typically between their junior and senior years. The course gives cadets pre-professional experience in their field, fulfilling the broad intent of the internship requirement. In addition, the course limits the time available for an internship; we expect very few cadets would be able to complete an internship and fulfill their ROTC obligations.)

Students who complete the Certificate in Security Studies will be academically trained and professionally prepared to continue their studies at the graduate level, or to enter the workforce at the state, national, and international level in a range of fields, including diplomacy, defense, intelligence, foreign policy, homeland security, international affairs, international development, human rights, and more.

PROPOSED NEW CATALOG TEXT:

Transcript-Recognized Certificate Programs

The College of Liberal Arts offers [~~three~~] several certificate programs, which are open to all degree-seeking University undergraduates. Undergraduates who complete certificate requirements in conjunction with their degree requirements or within one year after earning the degree receive recognition on the University transcript; students in integrated undergraduate/graduate programs must complete certificate requirements within one year after they complete their undergraduate degree requirements. A maximum of nine semester hours of certificate coursework may be taken after the student has earned the undergraduate degree. At least half of the required certificate coursework must be completed in residence at the University; some programs may require more work in residence.

A student may not earn a certificate in the same field as his or her major, and may not count the certificate towards their minor requirement if [at least one certificate course must be outside] more than six hours of the certificate's coursework may also be counted toward the requirements of their major. A certificate counted in place of a minor must meet the minimum requirements for a minor. However, certificate courses outside the major may be counted toward other degree requirements. For certificates not counting toward the minor requirement, at least one certificate course must be outside the requirements of the major.
