HDO 320: Multidisciplinary Methods for Exploring Organizations

In this course, students will learn how to analyze and synthesize organizational studies from a liberal arts viewpoint. They will examine types of organizations, explore problems these organizations face, and consider the ways distinct methodologies might address these problems.

HDO 379: Applying the Human Dimensions of Organizations

In this course, students will engage in a connecting experience that allows them to apply the multidisciplinary methods of the Human Dimensions of Organizations with an external entity. These individual projects enable students to broaden their understanding of the role of the liberal arts viewpoint in practical settings.

HDO 359H and 379H: Honors Research in Human Dimensions of Organizations

Students in the honors track will complete an extended connecting experience that they develop in consultation with a member of the faculty. In this connecting experience, they will describe an organizational problem that they witnessed and do an extended thesis that uses one or more disciplines to provide insight into how this problem can be addressed. The program will culminate in a poster session in which honors students present their work to faculty and students.

HDO301 is open to all undergraduates; other HDO-specific courses are restricted to majors.

In addition to the above courses, majors will be required to take 3 hours in (a) quantitative reasoning; (b) qualitative reasoning; (c) creativity and innovation; and (d) culture and communication.
