Hillary Hart, Secretary
General Faculty and Faculty Council

Independent Inquiry flag requirement be adopted for the Bachelor of Arts degree, item 8 will again be something of a de facto requirement for most of our majors, as well.

9. Beginning with the 2010-2012 Undergraduate Catalog, these three hours replaced Rhetoric and Writing (RHE) 306 in the English major. Given that UT Austin students must complete RHE 306 as a prerequisite for required English courses, doing so effectively made English a thirty-six-hour major. These three additional hours in English served no substantial curricular purpose: they were meant to provide struggling students with an opportunity to take another lower-division course in English prior to advancing to upper-division, and for more developed students simply to take more English. Because the former group is relatively small, and also composed of students who often choose to leave English for majors they perceive to be a better fit, the decision to jettison this relatively recent addition to the major was an easy one.

Honors 1. Adjusted to reflect the proposed change in the major above (item 8).

Honors 2 and 3. The English Honors Program Committee agreed that moving to a single minimum grade expectation of B+ for all honors courses was both logical and prudent.

Honors 5. In that sixty hours in residence are now required for any UT Austin Bachelor of Arts degree, this statement is superfluous.

Honors Addition. Our existing thesis course, 679H, concludes in the spring semester of a student's final year. The majority of UTeach-Liberal Arts English teacher certification program students are immersed in an intensive, off-campus teaching practicum during the spring of the final year, rendering writing a thesis at that time wholly impractical. The English Honors Committee prioritized creating an opportunity for UTeach students to complete our honors program on a four-year timeline: the addition of a four-credit thesis option, to be completed by UTeach Honors students in the fall of the senior year, is the result.
