Abstract

REQUIRED

MODS Element name: <accessCondition>

Short definition: Indication of rights relating to access and use of a resource.

Input guidelines: Select an appropriate statement about the copyright status (options include standard public domain mark and statements from <http://rightsstatements.org> and <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/>). Also select a value indicating the access restrictions to be enforced by the UT Libraries Collections portal. The following statements are available in the DAMS:

Copyright status (<accessCondition type="use and reproduction">)

MODS Element description

Element <accessCondition>

<http://www.loc.gov/standards/mods/userguide/accesscondition.html>

Guidelines for use

Select an appropriate statement about the copyright status (options include standard public domain mark and statements from <http://rightsstatements.org> and <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/>). Also select a value indicating the access restrictions to be enforced by the UT Libraries Collections portal. In order to include both types of information (copyright statement and access restriction), the <accessCondition> is repeated, with different type attributes respectively.

Mappings

Dublin Core

Depending on the direction of mapping necessary, check

- DC to MODS: <https://www.loc.gov/standards/mods/dcsimple-mods.html>

- MODS to DC: <http://www.loc.gov/standards/mods/mods-dcsimple.html>

MARC 21

See <http://www.loc.gov/standards/mods/mods-mapping.html#accesscondition>.

If no notes on access restriction or reproduction rights are present in the MARC record, you need to make a determination about the copyright status while creating MODS metadata.

Solr

In general, all MODS metadata is imported into the DAMS Solr server upon ingest. The ingest process generates Solr fields typically named according to the following schema:

`mods_value*_suffix`

where

- value** can be one or multiple element, subelement or attribute names that allow to distinguish Solr fields
- suffix* is s, t, ss, ms or mt, which refers to the type of data stored in a Solr field and how it is indexed. The Solr index usually contains multiple copies of each field with the same content, distinguished by their suffix.

The following table shows mappings between MODS elements and Solr fields for those fields that are currently used for display in the Collections portal, or where additional processing happens in Islandora or during the publishing process. Suffixes are ignored, unless relevant for the mapping.

| MODS element                                      | Mapping condition | Solr DAMS                                      | Solr Collections Portal                        | Notes                                                                                                                                                                                            |
